Scope:

Scope refers to where a variable is accessible from.

Global Scope:

Global scope refers to variables that are accessible anywhere in the script. They are defined outside any function or class, although they will be ignored in a function or class if a local variable of the same name is defined within.

Local Scope:

Local scope refers to variables that can only be accessed within the function or class that are defined in.